

Lindsay Mosher

Lindsay currently serves as Interim Director of the Illinois Technology Partnership (ITP), handling day-to-day operations, strategic planning, member recruitment and policy advocacy. She has worked with ITP since shortly after the organization's launch in 2008. Utilizing her experience in strategic communications and media relations, Lindsay works to promote an environment in Illinois that encourages technology investment and sustainability and provides consumers access to affordable, cutting-edge innovations.

While Lindsay's primary responsibility is the Illinois Technology Partnership, she also uses her experience in research, writing, planning and outreach to support other clients and initiatives as an account executive at a Chicago-area public affairs firm.

Prior to joining ITP, Lindsay developed and managed national campaigns for Susan Davis International in Washington, D.C., where she specialized in earned media placement and managed event logistics for clients.

Lindsay also has broad internship experience from strategy analysis and media outreach for Fortune 500 clients at Lindsay, Stone and Briggs, to internships at the White House in the Office of Presidential Correspondence, and the nationally syndicated Mitch Albom Show on ABC Radio.

Lindsay holds a B.A. from the University of Wisconsin's School of Journalism, with a focus in strategic communications.
